3. To study closely and dully.
Universal plodding prisons up
The nimble spirits in the arteries;
As motion and long-during action tires
The finewy vigour of the traveller.
He plods to turn his am'rous suit
T' a plea in law, and prosecute.
She reason'd without plodding long,
Nor ever gave her judgment wrong.
PLODDER. n. f. [from plod.] A dull heavy laborious man.
Study is like the heav'n's glorious sun,
That will not be deep search'd with faucy looks;
What have continual plodders ever won,
Save base authority from other's books?
PLOT. n. f. [plot, Saxon. See PLAT.]
1. A small extent of ground.
It was a chosen plot of fertile land,
Amongst wide waves set like a little nest,
As if it had by nature's cunning hand
Been choicely picked out from all the rest.
Plant ye with alders or willowes a plot,
Where yeerely as needeth moe poles may be got.
Many unfrequented plots there are,
Fitted by kind for rape and villainy.
Were there but this fingle plot to lose,
This mould of Marcius, they to dust would grind it,
And throw't against the wind.
When we mean to build,
We first survey the plot, then draw the model,
And when we see the figure of the house,
Then we must rate the cost of the erection.
Weeds grow not in the wild uncultivated waste, but in garden plots under the negligent hand of a gardener.
2. A plantation laid out.
Some goddess inhabits this region, who is the soul of this soil; for neither is any less than a goddess, worthy to be shrined in such a heap of pleasures; nor any less than a goddess could have made it to perfect a plot.
3. A form; a scheme; a plan.
The law of England never was properly applied unto the Irish nation, as by a purposed plot of government, but as they could insinuate and steal themselves under the same by their humble carriage.
4. [Imagined by Skinner to be derived from platform, but evidently contracted from complot, Fr.] A conspiracy; a secret design formed against another.
I have overheard a plot of death upon him.
Easy seems the thing to every one,
That nought could cross their plot, or them suppress.
5. An intrigue; an affair complicated, involved and embarrassed;
the story of a play, comprising an artful involution of affairs, unravelled at last by some unexpected means.
If the plot or intrigue must be natural, and such as springs from the subject, then the winding up of the plot must be a probable consequence of all that went before.
Nothing must be bung between the acts,
But what some way conduces to the plot.
Our author
Produc'd his play, and begg'd the knight's advice,
Made him observe the subject and the plot,
The manners, passions, unities, what not?
They deny the plot to be tragical, because its catastrophe is a wedding, which hath ever been accounted comical.
6. Stratagem; secret combination to any ill end.
Frustrate all our plots and wiles.
7. Contrivance; deep reach of thought.
Who says he was not
A man of much plot,
May repent that false accusation;
Having plotted and pen'd
Six plays to attend
The farce of his negotiation.
TO PLOT. v. n. [from the noun.]
1. To form schemes of mischief against another, commonly against those in authority.
The subtle traitor
This day had plotted in the council house
To murder me.
The wicked plotters against the just.
He who envies now thy state,
Who now is plotting how he may seduce
Thee from obedience.
2. To contrive; to scheme.
The count tells the marquis of a flying noise, that the prince did plot to be secretly gone; to which the marquis an-swer'd, that though love had made his highness steal out of his own country, yet fear would never make him run out of Spain.
TO PLOT. v. a.
1. To plan; to contrive.

PLO

- With shame and sorrow fill'd;
Shame for his folly; sorrow out of time
For plotting an unprofitable crime.
2. To describe according to ichnography.
This treatise plotted down Cornwall, as it now standeth, for the particulars.
PLOTT. n. f. [from plot.]
1. Conspirator.
As for you, Colonel, we shall try who's the greater plotter of us two; I against the state, or you against the petticoat.
2. Contriver.
An irreligious moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes.
PLOVER. n. f. [pluvier, Fr. pluvialis, Lat.] A lapwing. A bird.
Of wild birds, Cornwall hath quail, rail, partridge, pheasant and plover.
The bittern knows his time: or from the shore,
The plovers when to scatter o'er the heath
And sing.
PLOUGH. n. f. [plog, Saxon; plog, Danish; plogh, Dutch.]
1. The instrument with which the furrows are cut in the ground to receive the seed.
Look how the purple flower, which the plough
Hath torn in sunder, languishing doth die.
Some ploughs differ in the length and shape of their beams;
some in the share, others in the coulter and handles.
In ancient times the sacred plough employ'd
The kings and awful fathers.
2. A kind of plane.
TO PLOUGH. v. n. To practise aration; to turn up the ground in order to sow seed.
Rebellion, insolence, sedition
We ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd and scatter'd,
By mingling them with us.
Doth the ploughman plough all day to sow?
They only give the land one ploughing, and sow white oats, and harrow them as they do black.
TO PLOUGH. v. a.
1. To turn up with the plough.
Let the Volcians
Plough Rome and harrow Italy.
Shou'd any slave, so lewd, belong to you?
No doubt you'd send the rogue, in letters bound,
To work in bridewell, or to plough your ground.
A man may plough, in stiff grounds the first time fallow'd, an acre a day.
You find it ploughed into ridges and furrows.
2. To bring to view by the plough.
Another of a dusky colour, near black; there are of these frequently ploughed up in the fields of Weldon.
3. To furrow; to divide.
When the prince her funeral rites had paid,
He plough'd the Tyrrhene seas with sails display'd.
With speed we plough the watry way,
My power shall guard thee.
4. To tear; to furrow.
Let
Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails.
PLOUGHBOY. n. f. [plough and boy.] A boy that follows the plough; a coarse ignorant boy.
A ploughboy, that has never seen any thing but thatched houses and his parish church, imagines that thatch belongs to the very nature of a house.
PLOUGHMAN. n. f. [from plough.] One who ploughs or cultivates ground.
When the country shall be replenish'd with corn, as it will, if well followed; for the country people themselves are great ploughers and small spenders of corn: then there should be good store of magazines erected.
PLOUGHLAND. n. f. [plough and land.] A farm for corn.
Who hath a ploughland casts all his seed-corn there,
And yet allows his ground more corn should bear.
In this book are entered the names of the manors or inhabited townships, the number of ploughlands that each contains, and the number of the inhabitants.
PLOUGHMAN. n. f. [plough and man.]
1. One that attends or uses the plough.
When shepherds pipe on oaten straws,
And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks,
The cuckoo then on ev'ry tree, God provides the good things of the world, to serve the needs of nature by the labours of the ploughman.
The careful ploughman doubting stands.
Your reign no less assures the ploughman's peace,
Than the warm sun advances his increase.
The merchant gains by peace, and the soldiers by war, the shepherd by wet seasons, and the ploughmen by dry.

- Who can cease to admire
The ploughman conful in his coarse attire.
One
My ploughman's is, t'other my shepherd's son.
2. A gross ignorant rustic.
Her hand! to whose soft seizure
The eagle's down is harsh, and, spite of sense,
Hard as the palm of ploughman.
3. A strong laborious man.
A weak stomach will turn rye bread into vinegar, and a ploughman will digest it.
PLOUGHMONDAY. n. f. The monday after twelfth-day.
Ploughmonday next after that the twelfside is past,
Bids out with the plough, the worst husband is last.
PLOUGHSHARE. n. f. [plough and share.] The part of the plough that is perpendicular to the coulter.
As the earth was turned up, the ploughshare lighted upon a great stone; we pulled that up, and so found some pretty things.
The pretty innocent walks blindfold among burning plough- shares without being scorched.
TO PLUCK. v. a. [pluccian, Sax. plucken, Dutch.]
1. To pull with nimbleness or force; to snatch; to pull; to draw; to force on or off; to force up or down; to act upon with violence. It is very generally and licentiously used, particularly by Shakespeare.
It seem'd better unto that noble king to plant a peaceable government among them, than by violent means to pluck them under.
You were crown'd before,
And that high royalty was ne'er pluck'd off.
Pluck down my officers, break my decrees,
For now a time is come to mock at form.
Canst thou not
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom?
When yet he was but tender bodied, when youth with comelines plucked all gaze his way.
I gave my love a ring;
He would not pluck it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world matters.
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's right,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head.
Dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where fathom line could never touch the ground,
And pluck up drowned honour by the locks.
I will pluck them up by the roots out of my land.
Pluck away his crop with his feathers.
A time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted.
They pluck off their skin from off them.
Dispatch 'em quick, but first pluck out their tongues,
Left with their dying breath they sow sedition.
Beneath this shade the weary peasant lies,
Plucks the broad leaf, and bids the breezes rise.
From the back
Of herds and flocks, a thousand tugging bills
Pluck hair and wool.
2. To strip of feathers.
Since I plucked geese, I knew not what it was to be beaten.
I come to thee from plume pluck'd Richard.
3. To pluck up a heart or spirit. A proverbial expression for taking up or refusing of courage.
He willed them to pluck up their hearts, and make all things ready for a new assault, wherein he expected they should with courageous resolution recompense their late cowardice.
PLUCK. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. A pull; a draw; a single act of plucking.
Birds kept coming and going all the day long; but so few at a time, that the man did not think them worth a pluck.
Were the ends of the bones dry, they could not, without great difficulty, obey the plucks and attractions of the motory muscles.
2. [Pluck, Erse. I know not whether derived from the English, rather than the English from the Erse.] The heart, liver and lights of an animal.
PLUCKER. n. f. [from pluck.] One that plucks.
Thou fester up and pluck down of kings!
Pull it as soon as you see the seed begin to grow brown, at which time let the pluckers tie it up in handfults.
PLUG. n. f. [plugg, Swedish; plugg, Dutch.] A stopple;
any thing driven hard into another body.
Shutting the valve with the plug, draw down the sucker to the bottom.
The fighting with a man's own shadow, consists in the brandishing of two sticks grasped in each hand, and loaden with plugs of lead at either end: this opens the chest.
In bottling wine, fill your mouth full of corks, together with a large plug of tobacco.

PLU

- To PLUG. v. a. [from the noun.] To stop with a plug.
A tent plugging up the orifice, would make the matter recur to the part disposed to receive it.
PLUM. n. f. [plum, plumtree, Sax. blanne, Danish. A custom has prevailed of writing plumb, but improperly.]
1. A fruit.
The flower consists of five leaves, which are placed in a circular order, and expand in form of a rose, from whose flower-cup rises the pointal, which afterwards becomes an oval or globular fruit, having a soft fleshy pulp, surrounding an hard oblong stone, for the most part pointed; to which should be added, the footstalks are long and slender, and have but a single fruit upon each: the species are; 1. The jean-hative, or white primordian. 2. The early black damask, commonly called the Morocco plum. 3. The little black damask plum. 4. The great damask violet of Tours. 5.
The Orleans plum. 6. The Fotheringham plum. 7. The Perdrigon plum. 8. The violet Perdrigon plum. 9. The white Perdrigon plum. 10. The red imperial plum, sometimes called the red bonum magnum. 11. The white imperial bonum magnum; white Holland or Mogul plum. 12.

claude. 15. La roche-courbon, or diaper rouge; the red diaper plum. 16. Queen Claudia. 17. Myrobalan plum.
18. The green gage plum. 19. The cloth of gold plum.
20. St. Catharine plum. 21. The royal plum. 22. La mirabelle. 23. The Brignole plum. 24. The empress. 25.
The monsieur plum: this is sometimes called the Wentworth plum, both resembling the bonum magnum. 26. The cherry plum. 27. The white pear plum. 28. The muske plum.
29. The St. Julian plum. 30. The black bullace-tree plum.
31. The white bullace-tree plum. 32. The black thorn or floe-tree plum.
Philosophers in vain enquired, whether the summum bonum consisted in riches, bodily delights, virtue or contemplation:
they might as reasonably have disputed, whether the best relish were in apples, plums or nuts.
2. Raisin; grape dried in the sun.
I will dance, and eat plums at your wedding.
3. [In the cant of the city.] The sum of one hundred thousand pounds.
By the present edict, many a man in France will swell into a plum, who fell several thousand pounds short of it the day before.
The miser must make up his plum,
And dares not touch the hoarded sum.
By fair dealing John had acquired some plums, which he might have kept, had it not been for his law-suit.
Ask you,
Why sic and Sapho raise that monstrous sum?
Alas! they fear a man will cost a plum.
4. A kind of play, called how many plums for a penny.
PLUMAGE. n. f. [plumage, Fr.] Feathers; suit of feathers.
The plumage of birds exceeds the pilosity of beasts.
Say, will the falcon, stooping from above,
Smite with her varying plumage, spare the dove.
PLUMB. n. f. [plumb, Fr. plumbum, Lat.] A plummet; a leaden weight let down at the end of a line.
If the plumb line hang just upon the perpendicular, when the level is set flat down upon the work, the work is level.
PLUMBS. adv. [from the noun.] Perpendicularly to the horizon.
If all these atoms should descend plumb down with equal velocity, being all perfectly solid and imporous, and the vacuum not resisting their motion, they would never the one overtake the other.
Is it not a sad thing to fall thus plumb into the grave? well one minute and dead the next.
TO PLUMB. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To sound; to search by a line with a weight at its end.
The most experienced seamen plumbed the depth of the channel.
2. To regulate any work by the plummet.
PLUMBER. n. f. [plumbier, Fr.] One who works upon lead.
Commonly written and pronounced plummer.

nufactures of a plumber. Commonly spelt plummary.
PLUMCAKE. n. f. [plum and cake.] Cake made with raisins.
He cram'd them till their guts did ache
With caudle, custard and plumcake.
PLUME. n. f. [plume, Fr. pluma, Lat.]
1. Feather of birds.
Let frantick Talbot triumph for a while,
And, like a peacock, sweep along his tail;
We'll pull his plumes, and take away his train.
Wings he wore of many a colour'd plume.
They appear made up of little bladders, like those in the plume or stalk of a quill.
2. Feather worn as an ornament.
Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts,
Your enemies with nodding of their plumes
Fan you into despair.
